

US News & World Report calls her the "guru" of her generation

How to Get Everything You Want Without Waiting a Lifetime

Worldwide, millions of young adults are struggling to establish themselves and find success and independence. The issue of young people unprepared for the real world has become a global epidemic. Career expert Jennifer Kushell says the key is to help them confront the looming challenges and translate passions into careers.

Whether finishing school or starting over, the path to professional success can be daunting. With her bestselling book, advice columns, and a new type of social networking site, YSN.com ("Your Success Network"™), Kushell aspires to arm younger generations with critical tools and support needed to build a solid foundation for their future lives and careers.

Through YSN.com, Kushell's company has created the ultimate resource supporting millions of young people pursuing success, transitioning out of school, establishing professional identities, and making the most influential decisions of their lives.

Working with individuals and organizations across the globe, Kushell has discovered that anyone can master the skills needed to find success on their own terms, and no one is too young to pick them up. She will coach your listeners on how to overcome roadblocks to getting everything you want, such as:

- How young people can properly prepare for the real world.
- Why the average American holds 7 to 8 jobs between ages 18-30.
- Why the best education or a great résumé isn't enough.
- Why our school system is fundamentally flawed.
- How the rules of success have changed and what it takes to become successful today.
- What parents need to know about "helicopter parenting", "overcoaching", "boomerang kids" and more!

"...a road map to finding what you love and figuring out a plan to make your dreams happen." — Ryan Seacrest

CREDENTIALS: Thirty-three year old Jennifer Kushell, called "guru" of her generation by US News & World Report, is the co-author of New York Times Best-Seller SECRETS OF THE YOUNG AND SUCCESSFUL. At 13 she started her first business, and in 1994, at 19, created one of the first online communities, attracting aspiring entrepreneurs from 75 countries. Most recently, Jennifer co-founded YSN.com ("Your Success Network"), and became AOL's newly-minted Career Coach.

AVAILABILITY: Los Angeles, CA; New York, NY; nationwide by arrangement and via telephone.

Search our database of guests at www.rtironline.com.